

My daughter Rorrie sees things no one else sees, as is evident in this recent self-portrait. Once she woke up crying from a dream in which I'd died. She told me the dream seemed to go on forever, my ghost looking out for her as she went through life. "The Sand Slum Gossips" is for her.

—George Makana Clark

